Official Announcement, Pre-orders and Ship Date

Apple officially unveiled the iPhone 17 lineup on September 9, 2025, during its annual autumn event. On that same day the company revealed the standard iPhone 17 along with other models in the series.

Pre-orders opened on Friday, September 12, 2025, at 5 a.m. Pacific Time (PT) / 8 a.m. Eastern Time (ET) for the U.S. market.

Retail availability — both in-store and for delivery — started on Friday, September 19, 2025. On that day iPhone 17 became officially available for purchase in the USA.

What That Means for You — Pre-Order vs Buying in Store

If you pre-ordered on September 12, then shipments and deliveries typically began on or shortly after September 19 — the official release date. If you didn't pre-order immediately, many retailers and carriers started offering the device for walk-in sale as of that release date.

Early pre-orders tend to get preference for delivery; later orders or walk-in purchases may see some delay depending on stock and demand. The first week after release is the most hectic time, so availability and shipping windows may vary depending on where and when you order.

iPhone 17 Pricing and Models at Launch

The base iPhone 17 model in the U.S. was priced to start at $799, similar to the previous generation, despite earlier speculation about a price increase.

At launch, the iPhone 17 was offered with at least two storage configurations (256 GB and 512 GB) and in several colors — including black, lavender, mist blue, sage, and white.

Why September 2025 — Apple's Regular Release Cycle

Apple has long followed a pattern of announcing new iPhones in early to mid-September, with pre-orders opening the following Friday and retail availability about a week later. The 2025 release of iPhone 17 followed exactly this established rhythm.

This consistency helps customers and retailers predict release windows — which is why many people expected the launch to land in the second week of September even before the announcement.

What Changed in 2025: What's New About iPhone 17

While timeline is important, the launch of iPhone 17 came with noticeable upgrades — part of what generated the high interest. Among the key improvements are a bigger 6.3-inch Super Retina XDR display with smoother ProMotion scrolling, a more powerful chip, enhanced cameras, and a more durable build.

Apple also raised the base storage to 256 GB — double what many previous base models offered, giving buyers more space from the get-go.

What Should You Do If You're Outside the USA—e.g. in Indonesia?

If you are not in the U.S. but want iPhone 17, it makes sense to start checking authorized Apple retailers or resellers in your region shortly after the U.S. launch, as global rollout typically begins a few days or weeks later. Keep in mind that local taxes, import duties or regional stock constraints may affect price and availability.

Alternatively, some buyers choose to order from the U.S. and have the phone shipped internationally — but before doing that, check compatibility (network bands, warranty, charging standards) and shipping/import rules for your country.

In conclusion: the iPhone 17 is already available in the USA. If you were waiting for the release, the official release date was September 19, 2025 — and Apple has followed its traditional launch schedule. If you want to buy it now, that's entirely possible via official channels or retailers.
